Coiffure Hints—Graceful Wraps For Evening Wear of Felt Lace.

It is wonderful the difference in the appearance of a woman a becoming arrangement of her hair does make. Some women who never ought to wear flowers in their coiffure appear with a rose pinned over a red ear or with other ridiculous selections. Unless the hair is pretty and well arranged a flower calls attention to its unattractiveness.

This summer Dame Fashion demands at least an apology of a wrap, but it must be light and graceful and made of the most elegant materials one can afford. The modistes are making flit lace dolmans and small jackets to match the dresses they are turning out for the smart resorts.

A graceful little wrap suitable for wear at the seashore in the evening was evolved from a Bedouin shawl draped and so arranged that the arms were allowed to emerge from the side of the drapery, made of very fine sand colored tissue, with a broad band of mahogany brown above the hem and a tassel of brown silk where the usual hood appears at the back of the neck. Natural colored tussore silk is immensely popular.

As a finish for the lingerie shirt waist collar a piece of inch wide velvet or satin ribbon of some becoming color tied just below the ruching is most attractive and serves a double purpose in holding the collar in position.

This charming little costume is made of cream colored linen striped with blue and piped with plain blue linen, the trimming consisting of bias bands of the same fabric. It gives the long slender lines so much sought after this summer.

Factory Facilities Are Swamped With Orders.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 5.—The situation in the great and small textile industries in this city were never better.

Since Labor Day all of the corporations have resumed operations in full after the usual two week's holidays for the operatives. The Pacific, Atlantic, Everett, Arlington, American Woolen Co., and the Wood Worsted Co. report business better than ever.

The only drawback to the present prosperous condition is that help is not coming in fast enough to fill the positions in the various mills. During the past two years at least 5,000 people have come to this city, and of course the greater number of them have taken up the textile work for a livelihood and today 200 new arrivals is a low estimate of the newcomers now arriving each week.

Lawrence has witnessed great prosperity during the past three years and today sees no letup. The true barometer of this growth can be found in the extensive mill additions and improvements. There appears to be no end. The great influx of people has caused much building in the residential section and today tenements are hard to obtain. Because of this fact the Wood Worsted Co. is constructing about 40 houses for its men.

The Pacific Mills, Walter E. Parker agent, is running in full. The production of this plant never was so great. In all of its goods, that of calicoes, shirtings, alpaca, serges, and other worsted dress goods, the demand for future delivery is brisk. The Pacific is now erecting a $200,000 power plant and soon will change its motive power from water to electricity.

The Wood Worsted Co's big plant in South Lawrence is forging ahead and new machinery is being installed constantly. These machines are being started weekly and great numbers of new hands are constantly placed on the pay rolls.

The Washington mills of the American Woolen Co., and the big Arlington mills are still building new mills and additions.

The Atlantic Cotton Mills have taken on an apparent new lease of life. Always a very conservative corporation, this plant now is worthy of the name of a very progressive one. Great improvements and new markets have been secured through the efforts chiefly of its agent, W. H. Summersby. Its sheetings and shirtings are known all over the world. The plant is now erecting a new weave shed which will add 300 operatives to the pay roll. The plant now runs 2,400 looms and 1,200 will be added.

The Everett mill perhaps never were so rushed in order to fill its great order lists for cottonades, chevots, denims and other dress goods. In all of its departments rush orders have been the rule. New additions to the plant are being contemplated.

So the textile condition here is one of great prosperity in every branch. The Pemberton Co., the Arlington, in both cotton and worsted departments; George E. Kunhardt's fine worsted plant; Walworth Bros., worsteds, The Crescent Worsteds Co., Brown & Whitties, worsteds; Lawrence Duck Co., and several smaller concerns all report the same story—good business.

WHAT TO WEAR.

A Charming Demiseason Gown—New Sunshade—Neck Adornments.

Not as sheer or as crisp as gauze are the panama voiles, yet they are transparent and have a certain wavy effect that makes them charming materials for summer gowns. A model in palest silver gray, rather simply executed, shows a skirt which has a seam down the middle of the front and is of circular shape and barely escapes the ground. It is mounted upon a taffeta petticoat in a slightly darker tone of gray.

The ferrule is the most important part of the stick of the summer parasol, and in the ultra designs the handle is actually placed at what is usually the ferrule end.

The innumerable fashionable trifles for the neck—the lace and muslin cravats, jabots and plastrons, collars, and so on—are important aids in building up a toilet representative of the last word of fashion. Fascinating among the staple articles are the scarfs of embroidered muslin which are sometimes used for fichus and again are wound around the neck in loose fashion, with the ends confined at the belt and allowed to meander down the skirt. These sheer fabrics may be trifles, but they are unlimited in variety, and unlimited they may also prove in the matter of cost.

Dotted swiss is being greatly used for nightgowns this summer, and it is a really dainty and attractive fabric for this purpose. In this pictured instance the gown is of swiss, trimmed with frills of embroidery and beading threaded with ribbon, serving the double purpose of trimming and regulating the neck size.

FASHION FANCIES.

Buttonholed Scallop a Popular Trimming on Wash Dresses.

The buttonholed scallop is not only popular on fancy work, but is adorning some of the smartest of linen gowns. Particularly pretty is an apple green French linen frock with its jumper waist scalloped in white. The little cape of the same material is trimmed in the same fashion.

On a princess gown of pastel blue chiffon broadcloth buttons covered with the cloth and worked in webs with black embroidery silk are stunning. The upper part of the bodice is of Irish lace strapped with the cloth, which is held in place with smaller buttons of the cloth webbed in black.

Girdles are higher in the back than in the front, and, instead of being rounded as we have been accustomed to see them lately, they are pointed. Often they form part of the waist and are trimmed with innumerable bows and flat frills.

There is a certain new taffeta with a satin finish of a most supple type being used for little wraps of the cape variety. One such cape topped the going away gown of a recent bride. The gown was of navy blue voile and the wrap of taffeta the same shade.

The tailored shirt waist worn by the summer traveler is a very satisfactory model. It is laid in inch plaits that run all the way down to the bottom of the blouse on either side of the front box plait, and toward the shoulder the plaits are stitched only a becoming depth. The sleeves are of the regulation mannish type, with stiff cuffs, and the collar is a turnover affair formed of the shirt waist material.

The little girl's frock illustrated is of white linen, with hand embroidery about the waist and on the front of the box plaited skirt. The jumper is scalloped and done in wash thread.
